

Firm Overview

Since 1955, SMMA has forged extraordinary relationships with clients, established an enviable record of success, and designed award-winning environments. From our two locations in Cambridge, Massachusetts and Providence, Rhode Island, we are an employee-owned firm that remains true to our founders' vision of approaching design as a deeply collaborative process.

The unique multidisciplinary nature of our practice serves as a strength. Our culture places design at the forefront through visual artistry and unlimited access to multidisciplinary design talent and leadership. We maximize our value through early involvement and a convergence of artistic and technical focus that speaks directly to the needs of our clients. As pioneers of an integrated design methodology, we strive to redefine the way our industry works.

SMMA's mission is to design places that are

K-12 Studio

SMMA's K-12 studio is one of the most reputable in New England. Our firm brings together in-house educational planners, architects, and engineers to produce the most innovative and effective designs for 21st century education. Our integrated design approach seeks the input of all stakeholders — superintendents, principals, teachers, staff, and students — to examine every option and help education thrive.

Over the past 20 years, SMMA has conducted over 40 K-12 master plans and feasibility studies, and programmed, designed, and implemented over 60 schools, totaling over 8,000,000 square feet and over $2.5 billion school construction. Our firm's multidisciplinary knowledge base helps implement collaborative, student-centered, and project-based learning spaces into our designs.

Within each of our areas of practice we seek to lead, inspire, and deliver design excellence. We are thought leaders in the markets we serve with processes in place for continuous improvement, knowledge sharing, and project management.
